

Julianna Townley is a Louisiana native who has extensively performed as a soloist, chamber musician, and large ensemble musician within the state of Louisiana and California. She obtained her Bachelor's in Music Education from Southeastern Louisiana University where she actively participated in chamber groups, wind ensemble, and jazz band on both saxophone and flute while under the instruction of Brina Bourliea Faciane. While completing her degree, she completed her student teaching residency at North Corbin Junior High and Walker High School.

She then obtained her Master's of Music Performance from the University of Southern California where studied under Dr. Jessica Maxfield, Dr. Kenneth Foerch, and Sal Lozano. Julianna is currently working toward a Doctorate of Musical Arts at USC where she studies saxophone under Sal Lozano. While at USC, she has been an active member of their saxophone quartet, saxophone ensemble, and wind ensemble. She is also working towards minors in Music Teaching and Learning and Arts Leadership.